Cardiff Sixth Form College

For the second year running, Cardiff Sixth Form College in Wales is top of The Daily Telegraph league table for performance among 18-year-olds. The school, which charges £12,000 for day students and £29,700 for boarders, saw 94.71 per cent of exams graded A* or A.

Around 94 out of 112 candidates sitting A-levels last year were from outside the UK, including China, Botswana, Malaysia and mainland Europe. But the school says it is committed to UK-based students, with all Britons having 100 per cent of their fees waived to attend. Students need the equivalent of six A* grades at GCSE as an entry requirement, with around 750 competing for just over 100 places. The school's meteoric rise has been met with suspicion from some independent school heads, but executive director Yasmin Sarwar insists it is not a "cramming" school, saying most students go on to leading universities, including 16 to Oxbridge this year alone.

"Universities are looking for all-round talent. While we emphasise the academic, we also offer a range of activities, such as debating, sport, the arts and music," says Sarwar.
